

HONOR MEMORY OF JOAQUIN MILLER AT CABIN SERVICE

Rock Creek Home of Sierra Poet to Be Scene of Addresses by Friends.

Memorial service in honor of Joaquin Miller, poet of the Sierras, will be held this afternoon at his cabin in Rock Creek Park, under the auspices of the California State Association.

The famous Miller cabin was built by the poet while he was a Washington journalist, following his return from Europe. Many prominent American and European statesmen visited Miller in his humble home, and for many years the cabin has been a favorite shrine of sightseers.

Senator Samuel M. Shortridge, a friend of the poet, will deliver the main address, telling of Joaquin Miller's trip as a boy across the continent from Indiana in a covered wagon and of his struggles in the early pioneer days at the California gold camps. Congressman Arthur M. Free will tell of the log cabin home afterward built at Oakland, Cal., by the poet.

The program follows: Invocation, Rev. E. M. Mott, chaplain, California State Association; "America," song leader, Miss Helen Burkhardt; "Star Spangled Banner," recitation by John M. Kline; Joaquin Miller poems, "Columbus," by P. J. Hattigan; Reading Clerk, House of Representatives, President Thomas F. Flaherty, of the California Association, will preside.

For most direct route to the cabin, take the Fourteenth street car marked "Colorado Avenue" to the end of the route, then west by the reservoir and north along the beach road in Rock Creek Park. Free automobile service will be available from end of Fourteenth street car line to cabin from 2:45 to 4 p. m.

How to Look and Feel Bright in Hot Weather

This is the season when she who would have a lively complexion should turn her thoughts to mercolized wax, the firm friend of the summer girl. Nothing so effectively overcomes the soiling effects of sun, wind, dust and dirt. The wax literally absorbs the scorched, discolored, freckled, withered or coarsened cuticle, bringing forth a brand new skin, clear, soft and girlishly beautiful. It also unites the pores, relieves itching, and increases the skin's breathing capacity. An ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drugstore, applied slightly like cold cream, and washed off mornings, will gradually improve the worst complexion.

When depressed by the heat, and you want to freshen up for the afternoon or evening, bathe the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of water. You'll find this more refreshing than an astringent. It is fine for smoothing out wrinkles, even the deepest ones.

CAMERA MAN VICTOR AS LAWYER TRIES TO PREVENT "MUGGING"

There is no evidence of a melee in the photograph above showing Judge Milton Strasburger (left) and his client, Albert Taylor, the latter charged with having whiskey and alcohol illegally in his possession. But—that's not the whole story. The Times' demon camera man, Carl T. Thoner, was "laying" for Taylor when he left Commissioner law—now in operation—under which the government is paying millions of dollars to the railroads under the law's guarantee that they shall have money with which to pay dividends on their securities, but I imagine they are. It has caused terrific protest from owners of all kinds of other business and from farmers, all of whom have to bear their own losses.

"Well, the proposal to let the owners of a local utility in the National Capital take money from one group of people (who use electric light) and use it to pay profits to themselves as owners of another utility (which sells street car service) is, to my mind, infinitely worse in principle.

"The people of Washington are in a mood to be trifled with on this street car situation. They have suffered long and much, and are nearly at the breaking point. But beyond them are the people of the country, and I doubt if they would look with approval on what would be just one more piece of legislation for a favored group, to give one favored interest power to gouge the public deeper.

"These are the reasons I have in mind when I say that I don't if the average Congressman realized the far-reaching effect of the Woods bill."

USES STRONG LANGUAGE.

Mr. Westlake uses strong language, but the situation calls for strong language. The Washington Railway and Electric Company claims it is now earning money—or rather that it can't earn six per cent on its value fixed by the public utilities commission.

If this is true, and we can assume that it is, it means that the people who are losing money are the stockholders of the railway company. They want more income. They are frantic for more income. Right now they are proposing what they call a "zone-fare" system of charges, which, by the way, is not a zone-fare system at all, but merely a double-fare system, in order to get more money so that stockholders can get dividends.

They, in other words, are having the same experience that everybody else in business is having—they are losing money.

But they are different from everybody else in this respect. They propose, by taking in the power company, to shift their losses to the users of electricity—to make that part of the public protect them from the loss.

That's what they would try to accomplish if the Woods bill became law. And that's enough reason for this newspaper, for the Federation of Citizens' Associations, and for every body else who has the public interest at heart to be against it.

MRS. KABER SEEKS TO SHOW HUSBAND WAS DEGENERATE

Widow of Slain Publisher Makes Alleged Confession Detailing Acts at Home.

By MILDRED MORRIS.
International News Service.

COURTHOUSE, CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 9.—A plot with all the flavor of a medieval crime, with its intrigue, "black magic," and hired assassins, was unfolded here today when Mrs. Erminia Colavito, so called "Italian poison queen," took the stand in the trial of Mrs. Catherine Eva Kaber, indicted for first degree murder as alleged arch-conspirator in the slaying of her husband, Daniel Kaber, the wealthy Cleveland publisher.

FLEADED FOR BLACK MAGIC.

"Mrs. Kaber wanted me to use my supernatural powers to use my magic to kill," the "poison queen" testified.

"She says to me about my husband: 'The devil, I can't wait until he dies.'"

The accused woman agreed to pay Salvatore Cala, who figured in the murder plot as "the man with the capital," $5,000 to have "his gang" kill her husband, according to the "poison queen's" story.

"She said her husband had $50,000 insurance and she'd pay him out of that," the woman testified.

Cala was taken to the Kabers home by the accused woman the night before the murder to view Kaber as he lay asleep so the assassin would not mistake his prospective victim when he returned the next day to do his deadly work, according to the Italian woman's story.

Mrs. Kaber first secured from her "magic medicine" to kill Kaber, said the Colavito woman.

"She returned later, saying 'It isn't working fast enough,' the poison queen testified.

According to the woman, her now "famous magic medicine" was nothing more than a mixture of ginger ale and olive oil.

"I gave Mrs. Kaber this, telling her it would cure her husband of being so mean to her. She bothered me so I just put an ounce of the ginger ale and olive oil in a bottle and gave it to her to get her out of the house," the woman testified.

The entrance of the "poison queen" into the courtroom produced a sensation. She is under first degree murder indictment in connection with the case.

MARIAN DROWNED NOISE.

"The poison queen," a handsome woman, attractively dressed, related her fantastic story in a determined, matter-of-fact way.

Some "poison queen" gave her damning testimony the accused woman sat with head bowed, but showed her agitation by nervous twitches.

Urbana di Corpo, good looking and suave, alleged attorney of Mrs. Kaber, acted as "go-between" in the negotiations between the Italian woman, Cala, and Mrs. Kaber, the "poison queen" declared.

Kaber was to be killed the night before his murder, but Mrs. Kaber's mother, Mrs. Mary Brickel, "fell down on her part of it," the Colavito woman testified.

"Cala comes to me and says: 'We want to kill him,' but Mrs. Brickel wasn't on the porch as she promised. 'We'll kill her too,' Cala suggested."

Nineteen-year-old Marian MacArdle, Mrs. Kaber's daughter by her first husband, Thomas MacArdle, a Chicago business man, played the piano on the night arranged for Cala's gang to murder Kaber. In order to drown out any noise the assassins might make as they entered the house and pretended to rob it, according to the "poison queen."

"The fake" robbery did not happen on that night through failure of Mrs. Mary Brickel, Mrs. Kaber's mother, to signal Cala, the Colavito woman testified.

"Once," she said, "we go to di Corpo's house, we and Mrs. Kaber, and di Corpo ran after Mrs. Kaber and tried to kill her."

Mrs. Kaber gave her $500 after the murder to pay "one of the gang."

HAGGLED OVER PRICE.

Victoria Piselli, who, according to the state, did the actual stabbing which resulted in Kaber's death, haggled over the price to be paid for Kaber's murder, according to the "poison queen."

"He wanted $2,500 down, and says he and Cala will get their gang to play robbers and get into the Kabers home and kill Kaber," the woman testified.

"Mrs. Kaber said she couldn't pay him anything until her husband is killed, as she has to get it out of his insurance money."

CALL HIM DEGENERATE.

Kaber was a degenerate of the worst type and made improper advances to Marian MacArdle, his step-daughter, according to the woman, which was made by Mrs. Kaber to the New York police and which will be the basis for the woman's defense, it was announced today.

The woman's confession, running some forty typewritten pages, and obtained by Capt. Arthur Carey, of the New York police homicide squad, declares:

"He (Kaber) said Marian would have to get out of the house. He wouldn't have her there, when he found out he could not do what he wanted with her. I told him he needed a good beating up, and Emma (the poison queen) said she would have him beaten up."

"Where was you when you talked with this woman Emma about having him beaten up?"

"In my house," responded Mrs. Kaber, who said the woman had called back she wanted payment for the liquid she had been putting in Kabers' food.

The alleged confession contains everything Mrs. Kaber is expected to testify to when she finally called upon to take the witness stand in the death march to the electric chair.

The confession shows that Mrs. Kaber gave her husband "magic medicine," furnished by the Italian woman, to take the witness stand in the death march to the electric chair.

JAPAN DISCUSSES SECRET MATTERS OF GREAT IMPORT

Three Elder Statesmen Confer With Emperor on International Question.

By DUKE N. PARRY.
International News Service.

TOKYO, July 9.—The presence in Tokyo of the three elder statesmen, Prince Yamagata and Marquis Matsukata and Saloni, caused a revival of rumors that some step of great importance is being considered.

Prince Yamagata and Marquis Saloni were given a lengthy audience with the emperor at the palace. The Yomiuri Shimbun, reporting the presence of the emperor and the palace conference, said:

"The conference discussed plans for democratizing the imperial household."

"Also something of national and international importance was discussed, the nature of which we are not permitted to say."

The genre are statesmen who played a distinguished part in consummating the work of Japanese restoration. They enjoy an important influence and are consulted by the crown whenever any question of grave national difficulty occurs.

In historic prestige the three elder statesmen above all their contemporaries continue to exert potent influence on active politics, especially Prince Yamagata, who is surrounded by a large number of personal adherents.

OUST MARRIED PASTOR WHO SAID HE WAS SINGLE

BELLEFONTE, Del., July 9.—Because he was admitted to the Wilmington Methodist Episcopal conference as a single man, and, as a matter of fact, had been married for nearly a year, the Rev. Clarence Gilbert has been removed from his pastorate here.

According to an announcement sent out by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Berry, of Wilmington, their daughter, Miss Helen Berry, was married to the Rev. Mr. Gilbert at Washington in July, 1920. No one knew of the ceremony until the announcements were received. The news created a sensation.

An examination yesterday of court records of the District of Columbia failed to develop evidence of the pastor's marriage.

PAYS PRIZEFIGHT BET WITH WHEELBARROW RIDE

GREENSBURG, Pa., July 9.—Peddlers on Main street were entertained by a novel procession. A fat man painfully wheeled a wheelbarrow up hill, on which reposed Earl Seamer, of Middletown, whose choice in the recent pugilistic bout had been Dempsey. With perspiration streaming James Steiner trudged along, shoving the wheelbarrow before him. Steiner weighed 180 pounds when he began his 5-mile jaunt to pay his bet, but when he finished the hike from Middletown to Greensburg he intimated that he did not think he was the same man. Following in automobiles were men and boys, eager to see that the terms of the wager were carried out.

BERLIN THREATENED BY MUNICIPAL STRIKE

BERLIN, July 9.—The strike of the laborers employed on lands controlled by the municipality of Berlin, which has been in progress for some time, is threatening to develop into a general strike of all the municipal workers in support of the agricultural laborers.

A vote has been taken and the Communist organ, The Red Flag, declares that as far as the electric and tramway workers of greater Berlin are concerned the two-thirds majority necessary for the general strike already has been exceeded.

BOSTON, July 9.—Miss Eva H. Cressy, of Gloucester, thirty-four years old, expert road builder and her own manager in the Cressy Contracting Company, was yesterday made the defendant in a $50,000 suit alleging alienation of affection.

The papers were filed by Mrs. Valrie R. Pelworth, wife of Richard Pelworth, a steam engineer in the employ of Miss Cressy.

Since the death of her father a few years ago, Miss Cressy has carried on the business with marked success. She is declared to be one of the most expert road builders in this part of the country, and often "bosses" road gangs. She says the suit is "not justified."

COURT TRIAL HASTENS AGED CATERER'S DEATH

FROSTBURG, Md., July 9.—Samuel Paschke, aged sixty-eight, is dead at West Salisbury, a mining town, a few miles north of here. For many years he was proprietor of the West Salisbury Hotel, a licensed house until a few years ago, when his license was revoked. In course of time the barroom was remodeled and turned into a lunch room, which was conducted by Paschke and his aged wife.

The only relics of the days when the place was operated under a license were two bottles of intoxicants—a bottle of rye whiskey and a bottle of champagne. Several months ago, prohibition agents swooped down on the establishment and confiscated these together with a bottle of radiator compound. The compound was turned over to a chemist and subsequently information was made against Paschke, it being contended that grain alcohol and not wood alcohol was an ingredient of the compound.

The case was taken up in March and the court suspended sentence. Mr. Paschke felt that he had not received a fair trial and the suspended sentence was set aside. He was retried a few weeks ago, when he contracted a leakage of the heart. His death is attributed indirectly to the worry incident to the court trial.
